

U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

“We need people at the Department of Labor who have a grasp of the needs of the private sector and the real pressures businesses are under to make a profit while complying with huge numbers of regulations. Enforcement policies underline those. Alex Acosta will bring an understanding of these issues to the Department along with a good sense for what it takes to work with a bureaucracy to get things done. He will also take a reasonable, balanced approach to enforcement issues. He’s a smart, hard-working guy who will be a credit to the administration.”

–Randy Johnson, senior vice president of Labor, Immigration, and Employee Benefits for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce
